OSTON, Philadelphia and London proofs in favor of preventing, with the file, the upper front the from pressing one against another, and before the cost, are seen to be in a state of decay.

THE BOSTON PROOF.

Manin James, M. M. S. S. of Boston, has publish me on the teeth, which book is in Philadelphia

Mr. James writes as follows:—
Page 29.—Teeth become dead by being closely jammed in a crowded jaw—they are literally squeezed to death—their superficial discolouration is an undeniable proof of their destruction.

Page 38.—The sides of the upper front teeth lie closely together, while the crowns of the under teeth (the 4 front teeth order at the tening which is most distant.

a front,) touch only at that point which is most distant tout the gran. It is therefore in the power of the file to estroy the greater aptness of the upper teeth to decay. THE PHILADELPHIA PROOF.

sectable gentleman has called on a number of eminent dentute in this city, who all gave it as their opinion, that it was necessary to separate the upper front teeth, with the file, when crowded, and before the teeth were seen to be in a state of mortification.

The particulars of the advertiser's visit to the 12 physicians, on the subject of the file, has been published in the United States Gazette.

THE LONDON PROOF.

Mr. Fox, a London Dentist, is considered the father of English dentistry. His volumes on the teeth, are acknowledged to be the standard in the language. Mr. Fox, in his second volume, page 145, advances that the teeth in front in the upper jaw, ere very liable to decay, in consequence of being crowded or preased much against each other, and to prevent mortification from taking place, it is advisable to make a separation of the teeth with a very thin file.

Mr. James, and Mr. Fox, both recommend the teeth es, and Mr. Fox, both recommend the teeth be filed after they are decayed, as well as before mor fleation takes place between the teeth. Mr. James, the Boston dentist, also advances that to ride with, or to neglect disease in the teeth in the beginning, is maduces.

The advertiser has examined and operated on the testh of many thousand persons, and he could prove at immense length, that the file never injured a single tooth, when pressure has destroyed millions, and this great trath is well known to every experienced deatist.

YOUTH W. TIME.

BY MISS JEWSBURY.

In " The Spirit and Manners of the Age.

Youth went suing to Time one day, But not in the spring-tide clear; It was in winter, cold and grey, On the eve of the dying year. Youth danced into the sage's cell, With his nodding plame and jingling bell; "Give you good day," said the frelic mime, And doffed his cap—not a word said Time.

Time set posting his books that night
(All the world in his debt.)
That, ere he issued more "bills at sight," None might the balance forget.
Youth peep'd o'er his shoulder with laugh and jeer, Saying—"What, have we old Rothschild here?
But prison and pensnee are nought to me,
Since I myself have a debt 'gainst thee."

Time looked up, with his scythe beside him, And face commercially long, While the lock on his forehead said—" Wee betide him Time's exchequer is strong."
Couth turned over the ledger of life,
You have noted," quoth he, "my follies and strife, But where are the promises made me here, When I called on your worship this day last year?"

You were but a bugbear, you said to the old, That youth was your darling joy,
And for me your sands should be mix'd with gold,—
I've not had a grain, old boy.
'Tis not the thing when gentlemen meet,
That each should call the other a cheat; But pay me each promise ere morning-chime, Or else I must call you out, friend Time."

Time preached youth a lecture long. On his expectations vain, And bade him be thankful if one so strong Let even Hope remain : Much as the wolf in the tale of note, When the work had plucked the bone from his throat, Called it reward for kindness done That he let her abide with her head still on.

And so they reasoned with pro and con, And so they reasoned with pro and con,
Like a lawyer's each reply,
Till Time bade Youth pack up and begone,
For the hour of twelve was nigh;
And his wings he must plume, and his glass rub bright,
Before he commenced his New Year's flight;—
"Pay me," said Youth, "ere I leave your cell;"
"I'll and a recovery " said Time _____" farewell." 'I'll give you a promise," said Time, -" farewell

MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT AT HECKMOND

NIKE, NEAR LEEDS .- From the Leeds Inteligencer .- On Sunday evening last, during the performance of divine worship in the Wesleyan Methodist Chapel, at Heckmondwike, a rush was caused by a part of the congregation taking alarm at the falling of a stove-pipe, the result of which was the death of six individuals, chiefly young people. The following are the particu-lars:-Mr. William Dawson, a local preacher, of Barnbow, near this town, was preaching a sermon in the evening, after which tended to have made a collection for the Sunday school connected with that place. At about quarter past seven, it was supposed that the pressure of the crowd (for the chapel was filled o excess) had shaken or displaced the stove, which was in the body of the chapel, and little in front of the gallery. From the stove was an upright pipe, connected by an elbow with a horizontal one, running under the gallery for three or four yards, and out of the front wall of the building. This pipe was feebly supported by nail crooks, and, from the causes above-mentioned, it fell upon the people beneath, but without injury to any one. At this moment that part of the congregation in the vicinity of the the minds of many not acquainted with the trifling nature of the accident. The alarm immediately became general. The panic in the minds of the people in the gallery was very great, from the circumstance that a large quantity of dust and soot ascended toward hem. A belief was thus induced that one end of the chapel had fallen down. Then came a general rush from all parts of the chapel, which vas continued and increased by the crashing noise made by trampling upon the broken fragments of the stove-pipe which had fallen on the ground. The shricks of females, the cracking of the wood work, and the jumping of people over the pews, produced an appalling effect upon the congregation, which seemed engaged in ne general struggle to make an escape. preachers in the pulpit used every effort to quell the alarm, but their exertions were fruitless. An individual, perceiving the crowd hastening towards one of the doors, closed it. This caused the accumulation of a dense mass of human be ings in a porch of but small dimensions, till some persons who had made their escape from the open door, forced the one which had hitherto been kept closed. This being effected, a scene presented itself which beggars all description Those nearest the doors were young persons who were immediately thrown down and tramped upon by those in the rear: others fell upo them in making their way out, and when the pressure had subsided, the passage to the door was literally choaked with males and females lying on the floor, so closely wedged that it reuired considerable effort to extricate them rom each other. Those who had been fortunate enough to have their faces exposed to the air suffered comparatively little injury; but other were suffocated before they could be removed Part of the assembly remained in the chapel After singing and prayer, the service was concluded without making any collection. On Tuesday, an inquest was held on the bodies, when a verdict of died from pressure and suffication was returned as to each. A subscription has been commenced for the sur viving sufferers. MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT AT ANTWERP. It is our painful duty to record one of the most lamentable occurrences with which the annals of coach-travelling, so fertile in disasters, have ever furnished us. On Saturday evening week, at about half-past eight o'clock, the diligence from Brussels to Rotterdam left Antwerp with 14 passengers, and an immense pile of luggage. On entering upon one of the narrow bridges of the fortifications, the reins broke, and the horses becoming entangled in the harness, plunged to one side of the bridge, which occasioned the vehicle to totter, and in a moment afterwards to fall over the railings into the ditch, a depth of at least thirty feet. The mind shudders at contemplating the consequences, and we are grieved to have to state them in a most fatal extent. Ten passengers. including the conducteur, found a watery grave. Those who occupied the cabriolet had the fortune to escape; one of them, indeed, succeeded in rescuing a lady from destruction; but, alas! she is saved only to deplore the loss of two of her children, who had accompanied her. We learn that an English gentleman, a Mr. Logh, who resided in Shropshire, is among those who peished. We saw his valet yester lay-one those who escaped—but he was in so agitated a state of mind, as to render any questions rela-tive to the above event lamentable, cruel, and unwarrantable; we therefore have obtained these particulars from other sources: if they be in any degree incorrect, we hope it may be as to the extent of the calamity. The diligence, we are told, was from the office of M. Van Ghent, of Brussels, and we fear that there is too good ground for believing that the postition was intoxicated. The recurrence of accidents occasioned by the upsetting of diligences has of late become very frequent; we trust that the proper authorities will consult the safety of indi-viduals, as well as the character of the country, which, in all that relates to travelling, stands at a very low ebb, by adopting some more efficient and salutary regulations regarding diligences than those which at present exist.—Brussels Telegraph. Further Particulars .- The persons who perished are-Madame Worbet, wife of a com-mander of a battalion, with her daughter; Madame Meyer, wife of a garrison officer at Ypres, and her child; Mr. Van de Wiele, a horse-dealer; Mr. Vanschaegres, jun. a merchant of Roterdam; Mr. Legh, a gentleman from Cheshire, who, we understand, was proceeding to Amsterdam to bring away his daughter; M. Biesberger, M. Fumagalli, and the conducteur. Those who had the happiness to escape are-Madame Colyn, Messrs. Travillon, Delcourt, Overmer, a Swiss officer and Mr. Legh's servant. Three out of the four horses were drowned - Ibid.

MINIATURE STEAM ENGINES .- On Saturday evening last was exhibited, in the window of one of our neighbors, Mr. Ellis, grocer, of Lowgate, a mechanical curiosity constructed with singular ingenuity. It is a steam engine, of smaller dimensions than we have before seen applied to the diminution of manual labour,smaller, in fact, than the working models usually placed on the table of the lecturer. The workrapidity and regularity with which it performed its work, turning a coffee mill, the valves and mechanism must have been fitted with the greatest accuracy. It continued working the whole of Saturday evening, and attracted crowde of visiters. The principle of the engine is that of a high pressure, the diameter of the piston appears to be little more than an inch, and the space the whole apparatus occupies is incon-ceivably small for the power it is calculated to exert. This scientific rarity was wholly manu-factured, we are informed, by Mr. E. Northen, optician, a young gentleman who has already given proofs of his skill in the construction of everal models for the use of the Mechanica' Institute .- Hull Packet. On Saturday morning last, a grand concert took place at Guildhall, for the benefit of the distressed weavers at Spitalfields and Bethnalgreen. The performance consisted of the Ora-torio of the Messiah. The performers, both vocal and instrumental, contributed their exertions gratuitously. The orchestra, which was Mr. F. Cramer, and conducted by Sir G. Smart, boasted the powerful talents of Messrs. Lindley, Dragonetti, Nicholson, Willman, and other eminent instrumentalists; while the vocal department presented the clife of our English singers:—viz. Miss Paton, Mrs. W. Knyvett, Messrs. Braham, E. Taylor, Phillips, &c. The chorus was as complete as could be desired. Braham opened the Oratorio. Mademoiselle Sontag introduced a song between the first and second parts of the Oratorio. This treat was the more gratifying, inasmuch as it was in some measure unexpected. She sang Gulielmi's Gratius agimus in a style which afforded con-vincing proof that her excellence is not merely rously encored .- The Chancellor of the Exchequer, and the Right Hon. V. Fitzgerald, and a large number of other persons of distinction, were present.

LONDON AT EASTER.

The theatres of the metropolis, our readers are aware, annually at Easter provide holiday entertainments of a sort in theory adapted to the juvenals, but in practice found quite as suitable to the seniors among their patrons. We cannot we think, do better than endeavour to compress he reports of these Easter pleasures, which the London prints more circumstantially supply.

At Drury the Easter piece was a melo-dramatic tale of Fairy, taken from Crofton Croker's legends. It was entitled, " The Prince of the Lakes." The great O'Donoghue, who lives under the lake ——— (we forget what lake,) according to the legend, ascends to the surface once in seven years, and riding on his white horse, astonishes the natives not a little.

This piece was eminently successful, the scene ry splendid, the humour rac and the audience delighted. endid, the humour racy, the brogue rich, Covent Garden, Drury's great rival, produced another sort of diablerie.—" The Devil's Elixir, or the Shadowless Man." This too with splendid scenery and machinery was successful, and won the greatest applause.

The Surrey, the Cobourg, Astley's, Sadler's Wells, the Pavilion, all did their best with novelties to please their several patrons. The pieces and entertainments produced are not capable of analysis. Ducrow, prince of horsemen was greatly successful at Astley's.

After the theatres come the exhibitions .-Among these there is a panorama of Pandemo nium, the newest novelty, a canvas illustration of Milton-the refinement of the times!-The ritics call it a splendid and terrific exhibition.-A model of the Inquisition is also one of the Easter shows, and properly enough accompanies the above. Last of these is Tam o'Shanter and Souter Johnnie, which arrived in London in time for the Easter holidays. Of these figures it is said, eminent sculptors, who were incredulous of their reported merits, have confessed their unmingled surprise and pleasure on viewing them. So admirably chiselled are the hose of Tam, that the spectator can hardly persuade himself, without touching them, that they are not genuine knitted woollens. The same may be said of other parts of the dress, which fit so naturally to the body, that it is hard to believe they are not real. In conception of the design, as well as it the execution, it may indeed be said, that the sculptor has east his material in the identical nould of the poet's fancy.

Last scene of all, to close this trivial history. the Lord Mayor gave a grand entertainment at the Mansion-house, to half the world of London gentry and nobles, or such as the season congregates in London. There were 400 guests, among whom were several bishops, many lords and ladies, and M. P.'s as common as any thing. There was excellent feasting and decent merri ment, and proper speechifying, and all that sort of thing in the best style.

Thus Easter is enjoyed in London.

ARTIFICIAL LIMBS. A poor lad, named Thomas Cargill, who had been a dreadful sufferer in consequence of being attacked by a shark whilst bathing in the river at Sierra Leone, was yesterday brought before the LORD MAYOR, by Mr. Laundy, the surgeons' instrument-maker to St. Thomas's and Guy's Hospitals, in order for his Lordship to see what could be effected by mechanical aid, in substitution of the works of nature.—The poor fellow alluded to had lost both his bands.

The lad arrived aafe in this country with this curious coincidence that the vessel which he would have come by, if the above unfortunate accident had not taken place, was wrecked on her homeward voyage, and every soul on board

After the arrival of the lad in this co the owners of the wrecked vessel directed every care to be taken of him; but the question that puzzled all was what was to be done to put he poor unfortunate lad in a way to maintai neelf for the remainder of his life. Mr. Pirie, a respectable gentleman, residing in Freeman's-court, Cornhill, and who took a deep interest in the fate of the poor fellow, thought it was possible that the Lord Mayor might render him some assistance, and with that view he address ed the following letter to Mr. Hobler:-

"Sir,-Having often noticed the interest ken by you in objects of distress, I take the berty of sending the bearer, Thomas Cargill. poor sailor boy, who has been strongly recommended to me for assistance, and very appearance creates sympathy. He was attacked by a shark in the river at Sierra Leone, and lost one arm and the hand of the other, besides being much mutilated in other parts of the body.

"I have made a small collection for him, and intend continuing my exertions; but it struck me that if you were kind enough to state the case to the Right Honourable the Lord Mayor (who s always ready to assist the helpless) he might be pleased to recommend the poor boy to the notice of many charitable individuals, who might feel happy in having an opportunity of exercising their benevolence on such an object. There is a full account of the transaction from the medical gentleman at Sierra Leone, reported the Morning Hereld, of the 23d ult.

"I would wait upon you myself, but I am ns; and trusting you will excuse this liberty, I am respectfully, Sir, your most obedient humble servant, "JOHN PIRIE."

The poor lad was sent with the above letter to his Lordship, and the greatest difficulty was o ascertain by what means any assistance could be rendered him, as he was totally unfitted for any employment. The lad answered all ques tions put to him in the most explicit manner and evinced that he had had a tolerable good education. He also related sundry interesting particulars as to the mode in which he combatted the shark. The shark he said attempted to seize him by the body, and made several grasps at him; but, as a dernier resort, he contrived to threat his hand in the shark's mouth, in the hope of tearing out his inside. The shark was, however, too strong for him, and bit his arm off. However, as a last resort, he succeeded in thrusting his other arm into the shark's mouth and got his hand down to its throat, and that had the effect of making the shark give way, and he got on shore; but it is strange that the shark kept by the ship for several days, as if looking out for a victim. The poor lad it appear-ed was a native of the Orkney Islands, and Mr. Hobier observed that as he had some poor rela-tions in those islands he might be made oseful here as a school-master. The Long Maxon smiled at such a sugges-

Mr. Hobler assured his Lordship that the surgical instrument-makers had, by exertion, rrived at such a degree of proficiency that they could make instruments that would supply the place of this poor fellow's hands, and not only enable him to write himself but to instruct

The LORD MAYOR expressed his surprise at this statement, but was perfectly willing to do all in his power to assist a poor lad under such unfortunate circumstances; and, according to his Lordship's desire, he was sent to Mr. Laundy, and yesterday he appeared to exhibit the extent of the instruction he had received. In the first place be exhibited a pair of instruments by which ne was enabled to dress and undress himself, buttoning and unbuttoning his own clothes; another set by means of which he could lift and carry great loads; another by which he could carve his own victuals and help himself to any thing he wanted. But the most extraornary of all, was an instrument that enabled him to write, and also to teach others to write. The poor fellow with this instrument wrote his name in the presence of the Lord Mayor, and astonished every body in consequence of the facility with which he did it—and it was the on of every one that he was not only capable of writing himself, but of teaching others. The only question now remaining, was how the poor fellow was to be got back to the Ork-

Yesterday afternoon, April 22, an inquest was seld at the Feathers Tavern in the Waterloo road, before R. CARTER, Esq., touching the death of Mary Ann Kirshaw, who destroyed herself by taking laudanum. The deceased was 24 years of age, and of considerable personal attractions. The jury having viewed the body, on their return to the room the following evience was adduced:-

ney Islands, and what was to become of him when he got there.

Mr. Henry Laver, surgeon, of 37, Upper Stamford-street, deposed, that on Sunday night, about 11 o'clock, he was sent for to No. 70, commercial-road. On his arrival there, he saw the deceased, who was in bed, labouring under the effects of laudanum: she was delirious at the time, and by the bed-side, on a table, he perceived two empty phials, which bad a small uantity of the above liquid in them. dministered an emetic, and also used the stom ach-pump, neither of which operated beneficially, owing to the length of time that had elapsed, which must have been upwards of an hour from the period the laudanum was received into the stomach. She expired in about 11 hours afterwards. The witness added that on a post mortem examination of the body, he ascertained that her death was produced by laudanum, an ounce at least of which liquid she must have swallowed, and which it appeared the unfortunate woman had purchased in small portions at different chymists' shops. Here Mr. Laver handed in a letter, of which the following is a copy, and said that it had been placed in his hands by a person named James Spice, with whom he understood the deceased had been living for some time previous to her dissolution.

The letter was read at the request of the jury, and it was addressed to James Spice. It commenced thus:-

"My dear James .- Perhaps whon you receive this "My dear James.—Perhaps whon you receive this the woman whom you have so often professed to love is no more. The rash act which I am now about to commit well for eyer be hearthreaking to you. For what you have done, may the just God, who watches over our actions, reward you as you have done to me. It will be vain to attempt to save me, as I shall be beyond the reach of all human aid. When you have read this, you will only reflect that I have done my duty to you

Mrs. Charlotte Sliver examined.—She depended, that the deceased and a Mr. Spice extends the lower part of her house for the last has mouthe, the former always passing by the name of Edwards while there. Witness exceeded at first that she was a married woman, he has since ascertained that not to be the fact.—On Sunday afternoon, about 3 o'dlock, while witness was sitting in the hitchen, she heard a desperate quarrel in the parlow, and so predesperate quarrel in the parlour, and en propassion with Spice. After the alterenties between them was quelled, Spice went est about seven o'clock alone, and was soon afterwards followed by the deceased, who returned home about nine o'clock, and then west the bed-room, and began to walk about. ness, imagining that she was low-spirited in cosness, imagining that one was low-parent be-sequence of what had previously occurred be-tween her and Spice, went into the room and tween her and Spice, went into the room and endeavored to prevail upon her to accompany her to supper in the kitchen. The deceased, however, refused the invitation, and witness left the room. In about an hour afterwards, Spice room, the deceased's came home, and went into the deceared's apartment, and almost immediately called witness up stairs, saying that he believed Mary Ann had taken something. When witness entered the room she found the deceased setended on the bed, and apparently labs under great pain; she could not articulate time; there was a cup on the table which contained a small quantity of laudanum. Spice ran off for a surgeon, who attended immediately.—
The deceased died the next morning between 16 and 11 o'clock. About three weeks (continued) the witness) ago, the deceased and Spice had had a very violent quarref with one another. Witness on hearing the altercation, interfered to prevent it; and when she entered the room where it it; and when she entered the room where it arces, the deceased had a knife in her hand, which Spice was endeavoring to wrest from her; and he told witness that she attempted to cut her swa throat with it. The deceased was in a state bordering on phrenzy at the time; and after she became more composed, she evinced what the witness termed "flightiness," and railed against the King, whom she was in the habit of extelling; and attributed blame to His Majesty for giving the royal assent to the Catholic raile hill. This the witness considered was a proof of the soundness of mind.

soundness of mind. James Spice, the individual above alluded to, was next examined. He stated, that he had bewas next examined. He states, that he deceased about 10 months ago, at Astley's Amphitheatre, and believed at that time she was under the protection of a gentleman. Since then the witness and she lived together at No. 70, in the Com lady, and after dinner retired to their own spartment, where some words of a trilling natu curred between them, in consequence of his re-fusal to dress and accompany her to a christen-ing of their landlady's child. After the dispute was over, he went out to his uncle's. When he was over, he went out to his uncle's. When he returned, a little after ten e'clock, and en en tering the bedroom, she was lying in bed appearently in great agony; he spoke to her, and she with difficulty ejaculated, "God forgive me, dear James." He then perceived the letter, which had been just read, on the table, and also two phials and a cup, all of which were under he pockets. She had attempted to destroy hereal on three different necessions. on three different occasions since he had lived with her. In allusion to the letter above quoted, as ing, but in that of a female named Humphries, with whom she had formerly ledged.

At this stage of the investigation Mr. Humphries entered the room, and admitted that his wife wrote the latter. He said, on Sunday last, in the afternoon the description. in the afternoon, the deceased came to his (Mum-phries') house, and complained that Spion had ill-treated her; she said that she was most anzill-treated her; she said that she was most anxious to got away entirely from that person, and that the only plan to effect that would be to write a letter of the above nature to him, intimating her determination to destroy hurself.— Humphrins also stated that the deceased had frequently exhibited the marks of ill treatment on her person, received at the hands of Spice, to him and his wife. She had been recently, he said, under the care of Dr. Menzies, for a violent kick-that Spice gave her.

that Spice gave her.
Roberts, the beadle, said that Spi married man, and that his wife had called some days previously at the house where her husband and the deceased lived.

and the deceased lived.

The jury remarked, that not withstanding there was great cruelty practised by Spice on the deceased, yet it was given in evidence that her death arose solely from the effects of the landsnum she had taken on the occasion while laboring under insanity. A verdict to that effect was accordingly returned:

POACHERS .- LENT ASSIEES. CRESTER, APRIL 18.

(B fore the Hon. THOMAS JERVis.) The Game Law-Porching-Trial of 28 Men. They further indicted for having entered a cer-wood ermed, with intent to kill game and

To these charges they one and all pleaded not guilty."
The ATTORNEY-GENERAL intimated that dd first try them for the misdemeanour. Mr. Bermant Jowes objected. The constant ele was, where there was a capital charge, to also that first, and instanced the case of "the Buxton and others," tried before Mr. Bayley at the last assizes at Lancaster.

The ATTORNEY-GENERAL then intimated that if it was pressed, he would try them capitally first, but the course that he was pursuing out of mercy to the prisoners. The learned sman then said, that he should first try Davis, John Timmis, Samuel Martin, Mat-Bowyer, James Woodhall, and William Mr. Serieant Jowes objected to this course

If was a joint indictment of a covey of men, and they ought all to be tried together.

Mr. Serjeant Caose contended, that the Atterney General could, if he thought fit, try every man separately; and that he had a right to take that course that was most convenient, and the most suitable for the ends of public justice. In the case of Hardy, Horne Tooke, and others,

In the case of Parey, Horse 1 one, and a such a course was adopted.

Mr. Serjeant Johns.—With regard to that case, his learned friend was mistaken; there it was by cassent. He recollected a case that was tried before Mr. Justice Park, where 26 persons were tried for a conspiracy to raise wa-ges, and the dock was in that case actually en-larged, that all the prisoners might be tried to-gether.

The COUNT, after further argument, held that it was competent for the Attorney-General to try separate if he thought proper.

Mr. COTTINGHAM opened the indictment.

The ATTORNEY-GENERAL proceeded to state the nature of the charge, which he described as ned and aggravated that had ever occurred except one. If men were to go out together to the number of 20, 30, or 40, d, and put at defiance all decency, then would be safe. Misdemeanours of this iption fell peculiarly hard on the lower protect their property,—the protection of such It would be clearly shown that the object of the accused could not be that of killing pheacants only, but that they went out in such num-bers for the purpose of resisting those persons who might be out for the protection of their em-pleyers property. After some further remarks, facts of the case at length. Joseph Burrows (an accomplice) examined by Mr. Serjeant Cross-I lived in December last at Baddington, near Nantwich. Darnhall is more than six miles from Nantwich. It is about eight miles. I am a labourer. Any body employs me. I know all the six men at the bar. The nearest to me is called "Jack the barber," (Davis.) I went to Darnhall one night in company. I cannot tell the day of the week. We went for to shoot pheasants. John, the bather, first proposed it to me to go. It He saked me if I would go with them to Darn-hall. He said there would be about 30, and asked me if I would make one. It was on Wedsoday first. We were to meet at Beam-bridge, that is on the way from Nantwich to Darnhall I agreed to go, and did go. I set out about helf-past six o'cluck. I cannot tell the night: we went out twice to go. At Nantwitch I met Platt, and we went together to John the barber's house. John Platt and I went from the barber's house. I had a gun from the bar-ber's, and John Platt put in a flint for me.— We want to Beam-bridge, which is about a mile from Nantwich. The Nantwich lot was meet there. We went on a little way .-There were some went down by the meadows, and not by the high way. We left a part on Beam-bride, five. I went on with another to the Bookery-bridge; that is about a mile from Beam-bridge: there we stopped until the rest bory party. When we got out we know that they were to meet us; we stopped some time at the Rookery-bridge; four of the men at the bar were there; that is, Davis, Timmis, Bowyet, and Hassall. We then went to a place called the Sandhole; the other two prisoners joined as at Minebuli; there was just 20 of us led at the Ruokery-bridge; we had 17 guns amongst us; we were there abo ut three quarters of an hour; we heard a gun fire at Beam-bridge; we had passed the Wrenbury party, and our; we heard a gun fire at Beamthat was the signal that they had come up; we fired, that is "Jack the flarber" fired, in answer to the other party; we had paper amongst us, which Ralph Spencer brotght to put in the front of our hats, that we might know one another, and it was used for that purpose; it was white paper. Before we got to the Rookery-bridge we met Mr. Cook's coachaian: we met another a before, when the barber said he thought that was Mr. Cook's coachman. When we really met Mr. Cook's coacaman, Jack the barber was he, and that if he told that it was him he met, he would pay him off at the next fair. There was a fair about Christmas at Nantwich. When we had all met and por the paper in our bate, we went in a body along the high road, through Minshul, carrying our guns: it might then be half-past nine o'clock. No one at first carried more than one gun. George Read had one in a beg. We proceeded to Darnhall, and upon arriving there we went into a plantation; we went into the wood: we shot 15 phensants, about that time we were disturbed; we had been shouting for about a quarter of an hour; we all went into the wood, there were then 26 of us, and we had 19 guns. Woodhall brought us, and we had 19 guns. Woodhall brought gun: we were interrupted by the watchers party shouted "They are here, they are We all then gathered up as fast as we could, and made up to the watchers at the farm-yard. No dog had been then shot. It rained very heavy: it was moonlight, but over cast. We shot the pheasants foosting. At the farm-yard there were from eight to ten guns shot off by the poachers. I was behind. I did not see the gum shot off; I only heard them, and I heard the dog make a dreadful cry.—

Thomas Spencer said, "Halt, my boys, and charge again." There was firing again, but not in the farm-yard. We went back into the wood, and shot several times at pheasants. We then returned back through the farm-yard, home. We had the game with us, and went a good way before we divided it. There was not a bird apiece. I got one. There was to be more shooting that night, to make every man one. Those that did not get a bird "mun go without that time." We went into a hovel, and John Platt leeted his pipe, John the barber went out to look about, and said it did not rain much, and added, "they were a nice parcel of devils for sheltering there." They met Mr. Cook's coachman again. The Leighton party separated where we divided the pheasants, and the Wranbury party after we had passed the Rookery-bridge. We had a dog with ue: it was

I had been at work for Mr. Davis, at the top i'th' canal. "! will na swear nought about it neither rect nor wrong." [As to the time he had been employed.] Davis was not the last person in whose employ I was. I had worked for Mr. Walsh, of Nantwich, he is —— (the witness stood for some time, trying to recollect what, but could not.) I was putting down posts and ails for him. I will not swear nought about whether that was within two months. My forune's small. I have a wife and two children. for my bread when I could get work to do. Walsh would not pay me without working for it. After I ceased to work for him, I mainained my livelihood by working for it. I have been at Knutsford, part of my time in the gaol. I have been in the Castle here. I slept there last night. I expect nought about getting free f I convict these men. I dona care whether I am convicted or not. Such a thought never crossed my mind. How I got my livelihood for the last six weeks before this affair happened, has nought to do wilt; I tell you I heard of th reward-I heard of it the second day after it was done. I cannot tell any thing about the rehe reward was 101. per man, for every one that was convicted. I gave evidence of 25. I cannot tell that that is 250%. It was not a month before I gave my information. I went to Mais ter Tompkinson of my own accord. I went as a matter of justice. Samuel Foxley went with ne. My conscience smote me; that was it exactly. I cannot say how soon the love of justice crossed my mind. I told Foxley nothing at all. I went to ask him to go with me. I did not like to go by myself. Foxley is a farmer ; he gave me a little drink at Nantwich; that was af ter I had been at Mr. Tomkinson's. I had some drink with him on the Saturday before, but not on that business. I had a pint of ale and a nag-gin of gin with him. On Sunday morning we went to the justice. My conscience struck me some time before that. I had two horns of beer at Mr. Temkinson's. I told Mr. Temkinson something about it then, but not all until Tuesday, and I was then committed to prison. There was no money shown to me, and I have never said that there was. I know Whally, I have told him that there was money shown to me. By Mr. Serjeant Cross.—I keep no accounts of my money, nor any dates. I was in Knuts-ford gaol for this business, and no other, nor in hester. I did not mention to any one that I ished to be at large. If I had been at large, should have been in danger of my life, and therefore I wished to remain in prison. I have ot been there against my will.

Edward Hurd, examined by Mr. Corring-AM.—I am gamekeeper to Edwin Crobett, Esq. of Darnhall. I was called out on the night of he 17th of December. The witness went on to state, that he went with others to the wood. and said, "Now, my boys, take care of yourselves. I'll have some of you." He put two He saw guns pointed at him, and said, "If any of you shoot at me, I'll drop you, for I can shoot as quick as you can." He had a gun with him The men then ran up the wood. He did not hear them say any thing. When they got up the wood, they shouted out, "They are here!" They are here!" They then all shouted, and he thought by the noise they made, that there were 50 or 60 of them. The noise might have been heard a for great many miles. He saw a great crowd of them, and they came within 20 or 25 yards of him. One of them said, "Where is he?" Another answered, "He's standing yonder; and two or three of them said, "D-n him shoot him," and shot from a gun struck the hedge where he was standing.

Mr. Justice Jenvis.—Are you not merging from the misdemeanor to the felony? You had better go no farther. Examination continued.—He walked backwards to call his dogs. He did not know any of the men. Darnhall was a place where a good many pheasants were preserved. There was a dog killed. The wood was not in Darnhall, but in Whitegate.

Mr. Serjeant Jones here said, that to save the time of the Court, he would take an objec-tion to the indictment. I hey were, under the 9th of George IV. c. 69, s. 9 and 12, bound to introduce an averment as to the time of nigh n the words of the statute, and also of the unlawful entry. The indictment had been framed on the old statute of the late King.

Mr. J. JERVIS followed on the same side.

Mr. Justice JERVIS said the three first counts ppeared to be bad, or at least loosely drawn: he fourth count would do, although there might be some objection to it; but as the objec-tions were all upon the record, he should go on, and, in case of a conviction, a writ of error might be brought. John Boden, wagoner to Mr. Corbett, was out with the last witness. He heard some of the poachers say, "Never mind, lads, we only want a few pheasants for Sunday's din-He thought it was the voice of John the barber, whose name is John Davis. He had known him ten or a dozen years. He mentioned the fact the next day.

By Mr. Serjeant JONES .- He could not say now long it was before that time that he had seen Davis; none of the men spoke but him. Joseph Clarke, coachman to Mr. Cooke, deposed to seeing several lots of men on the night of the 17th of December, and the morning of the 18th. He thought that one man was

John Davis, who went by the name of Barber Jack. They had guns. Several other witnesses were then called, who deposed to several of the facts deposed to by the accomplice, and some of them gave distinct evidence, although of a slight nature, independent of their corroborative testimony. One of theme who took Timmis into custody, said, when he fold him that it was for posehing at Darnhall, he cursed Darnhall and all belonging to it, and first pheasant into the country; and when in-formed that Burrows had told, he said, "He has but one eye, and if I get hold of him, I'll make him that he shall not see with the other." When taken he attempted to run away, and dragged witness down a flight of stairs. Bowyor also attempted to get away, and was taken when in the act of getting over the top of a wood-house. Against Ifassal it was directly sworn that he said, "There had been, or, we had a h-l of a row at Darnhall," and that they had shot a dog and 15 or 16 pheasants. The stable of Mddlewich proved that the wood was in the parish of Whitegate in the township of

This was the case of the prosecution Mr. Serjeant Jones, in a most energeti-speech, addressed the jury for the defendants.

The learned Judge commences are summing up by expounding the law,, and reading to the jury the highest authorities with regard to the extent of credit that should be given to the evidence of an accomplice. Undoubtedly, in the dence of an accomplice. Undoubtedly, in the present case, the evidence against the prisoners at the bar depended almost entirely on the evidence of the accomplice. But they would have to say whether that evidence was not confirmed by so many circumstances that the guilt of the prisoners could not be doubted. The confirmaory testimony need not be applicable to them all: if they found that the evidence of the accomplice was confirmed as to one, that he had spoken the truth in all the material parts as it regarded one, he would be entitled to credit as his evidence attached to the others. His Lordship then went through the whole of the evidence, which, with the comments thereon, occupied nearly two hours.

The Jury consulted together for a few minutes, and then brought in a verdict of Guilty against them all.

Mr. Justice JERVIS .- Call the prisoners up Mr. Serjeant Jones .- My Lord, I mean to Mr. Justice Jenvis.—You must bring your writ of error. Mr. Serjeant Jones .- My Lord, I trust that shall be first heard.

Mr. Serjeant CROSS .- You have already been Mr. Serjeant Jones .- How can I have been heard in arrest of a judgment that has not taken place? The learned Serjeant and Mr. J. JERVIS were then heard, and took the same and other object tions to the indictment, as were taken in the course of the trial. Mr. ATTORNEY-GENERAL was about to re-Mr. Justice Jenvis said, he need not trouble

The objections were such as he should over-rule and pass sentence.

Mr. Serjeant Jones.--Your Lordship will llow us a copy of the indictment.

Mr. Justice JERVIS .- Certainly. His Lordship then proceeded to address the risoners in the most solemn manner. They had been found guilty of going out in a body, no less than 26 in number; and it was impossible that they could have so gone out, armed with nineteen guns, for the sole purpose of killing game. had, without doubt, gone out for the purpose of resisting and overpowering the keepers that might be brought against them. He had no hesitation in saying, that the evidence against them was such, that had they been tried upon the expital charge, a conviction would have followed and some of their lives would have been forfeited, and the remainder would have certainly been transported for life. had received good characters, and might have been men of good character up to the time which must be put a stop to, and for would be severely punished; it was a mistaken lenity to expect that such conduct should be slightly punished; and they would find, and he also hoped that others would find, that the laws were strong enough to put a stop to sucl his Lordship sentenced them to be transported beyond the seas for the term of 14 years. Timmis said, "My Lord, may my eyes drop,into my hands if I was on the ground that night. Long life to you." Some female in the crowd immediately screamed out and went into hysterics, and was carried out of court. The crowded state of the court was almost beyond conception.

The other 14 men were then placed at the bar, and requested that their plea of not guilty" might be withdrawn, and that they night plead "guilty." The ATTORNEY-GENERAL had no objection to their pleading guilty, and entering into their own recognizances to appear for judgment if called upon.

Mr. Justice JERVIS then addressed them, and nformed them that if they were found committing such offences again they would be taken up and sentenced to be transported for the same period that their companions had just been senenced to. They then entered into their own recognizances in the sum of 100% each, and were discharged.

FATAL AFFRAY AT ROCHDALE.

Manchester, Wednesday evening. a melancholy affray has taken place. Yester-day Major Beawick, a magistrate, who lives in the neighborhood of Rochdale, attended at the Wellington Hotel in that town, to take the examinations of the men who were taken into custody last week, while gathering shuttles at the different factories which were attacked. was not present at the examination, but I understand that it was conducted with great pa-tience, and that after being engaged in it for upwards of six hours, the magistrates discharged seven of the men, and committed 16 to take their trial at the York assizes. The Wellington Hotel is at a considerable distance from the prison, and as it was feared that a rescue night be attempted, the prisoners were not only handcuffed but all fastened together by rope; and in this manner were conducted through main street by a party of the carabineers This unfortunate public display seems, in some degree, to have led to the fatal result; for as the procession was on its way, the feelings of the spectators were wound to the highest pitch, and loud execrations of the soldiers were mixe with expressions of sympathy for the men who were thus carried bound to prison. Several exercised throughout a most laudable forbearance. One private, who was struck, drew a pistol from his holsters, but was immediately checked by his officer, who said, 'Be calm! be calm! Don't mind a hit with a stone.' the prisoners were lodged in the gaol, the mob partly dispersed, and the carabineers retired, eaving the prison guarded by nine soldiers of the 67th foot, commanded by a serjeant and a corporal. This was about eight o'clock. The mob, seeing so small a force, rallied, and in a short time began to throw stones at the guard, and several of the men were hurt. The ser jeant then said, that if they did not give over, he should be compelled to order his men to fire; but his warning produced no effect. . He ther vished the man had been shot who brought the ordered out two men, and told them to fire. The men obeyed, and the report of the muskets preduced a good deal of consternation. But when it was seen that no one was hurt, the mob rallied, and attacked the soldiers with ad-ditional fury. The serjeant then ordered out all his party, and the whole of them fired. Again there was a retreat, but as none were killed, though several were wounded, another attack was made, headed, as I was told, by a min of the name of Taylor, who said if no one else rould go in upon the soldiers he would. Another volley was then fired. Taylor fell dead upon the spot, and several others were mortally wounded. There was then an instant retreat, nd in a second not a soul was left in the street.

"A lad named Walton was amongst the num ber of those who were wounded. A ball went n at his mouth and passed out at the back of is head. He died five minutes after being removed to Mr. Wood's surgery.
"A man of the name of Schofield was shot ight through the belly, the ball entering in front and coming out at the back. He died this morning, and has left a widow and five children. "A lad named Buckley, who seems to have een drawn into the crowd by curiosity, was also shot right through the bowels, and died this morning.

"At the first fire over the people's heads, a all entered an upper window of Mr. Stott's our-mill, at least eighty yards off, where Mr. Stott's son, a child between five and six years o age was standing, looking out on the mob. The ball entered his forenead, and went out at the back of his head; the poor child expired while I was there this forenoon. "Two other men named Ray and Yellow were supposed to be mortally wounded.

"One young man has had an arm amputated, and another has had a leg amputated. Both are likely to recover. One girl was shot through the knee. Besides those I have mentioned about ten more were wounded, so that every shot fired by the soldiers seems to have taken

"I mentioned in my last night's letter the extraordinary fact of a great part of Manchester being entirely at the mercy of the mob. After my letter was sent off, there was a renewal o plunder, and notwithstanding the activity of the military and police-officers, three shops were broken into, and completely gutted of their

"To-day there has been no disturbance, either here or at Rochdale. I rode through Middle-ton on my way to Rochdale, and through Bury on my return, and all was quiet there."

At a public meeting of the British Medico-Botanical Society, held in London in April last, Mr. Barbour [the American Minister] spoke

"He was requested to return thanks for his brother Ministers, the representatives of foreign Courts, from no merit of his own, but from the ircumstance of his speaking with facility the English language-a facility which he possessed from enjoying a common origin with English-men. [Hear! hear!] Though distance might separate England from America-though the wide waste of waters rolled between them-yet it should be remembered that they used the same language, and their origin was derived from the same source. In the language of adaptation used by one of their most eloquent orators, he would say-"Our people are your people, and our God is your God" [cheers.] He wou'd further, in the same spirit, say- 'May riches set upon your right and your left hand; may your vays be the ways of pleasantness, and your paths be the paths of peace. These were his senti-ments towards the English nation—sentiments which he had no doubt were fully shared by his countrymen. We have before neglected to mention the circumstance, says the Baltimore Chronicle, that Captain Kearny, of the Navy, who has recently eturned to the Unite States in the brig Pacific at this port, from Mahon, brought with him two Jacks, fou. Jennies, a Thibet Ram, and a Turksh Horse-the latter a most beautiful gray, from he mountains, about 16) miles east of Smyrna; is small but very perfectly formed, can climb ike a goat, and is remarkably docile. The ram, which is on the farm of Robert Oliver, Esq. is of the species celebrated for its very broad tail, and for the delicious flavor of the mutton. One of the Jennies is three years old, and only about thirty inches high, but proportionably formed, and is truly an interesting animal-unusually o, probably, when contrasted with one alongside of it, which is only three months old and as large again.

PHILADELPHIA:

MONDAY EVENING, JUNE 15, 1829.

The following is the passage, in Lord WEL-INGTON's reply to the Marquess off ANGLE-EA's explanation, alluded to in some of the ONDON papers as the cause of a coolness beween the Minister and the King. Though litle credit is due even to positive assertions on such matters in opposition journals, his Majesty could scarcely have been pleased with the censure of his conduct which the Duke's remarks cannot but be understood to convey-supposing Lord ANGLESEA to have spoken truth, which it s not easy to doubt.

The Noble Marquis has moved for one two letters of a correspondence; but to elucidate that correspondence, of which he has read extracts, the Noble Marquis has not read the half of what was required, and he has even omitted some of the most material portions of the letters, and these portions, too, without which I think the whole question cannot be clearly understood. I also observe that the Noble Marquis has read extracts from letters the most secret and most confidential which possibly could pass between a Lord Lieutenant of Ireland and the Government of this country -namely, those letters which contained the sentiments and the opinions of the Sovereign .-(Hear.)-The Noble Marquis says he has obtained authority to read these letters, and to make their contents public. I confess I understand that measure differently from the Noble Marquis. I received the King's pleasure to relieve the Noble Marquis from his Government of Ireland, because his Majesty was convinced, from the correspondence which had taken place, that the confidence required between the Government of this country and the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland could not be maintained; and his Majesty having signified it as his pleasure that the Noble Marquis, one of the parties to that correspondence, should, from the nature of ts communication, be relieved from the Government of Ireland, could not have given his consent that the correspondence should be made

The Marquess re-asserted the fact of his havng obtained full permission. He said:-" With respect to the declaration of the Noble Duke, by which he seems to doubt my having received the permission of the King to read the correspondence which I have this evening laid before your Lordships, I beg to assert, most unequivocally, that I had his Majesty's permission to read any papers that I might deem necessary for the vindication of my administration in Ireland .-Hear, hear.) -In consequence of this permissio have produced the papers now before your Lordships; and if the Noble Duke can discover that I have asserted what is false, I shall find no fault with him if he advises his Majesty to take away all those honors which I have received at his hands. * The day but one after my arrival in England, I demanded an audience, and waited upon his Majesty, on which occasion I explained to the King the policy I had pursued in Ireland: and on referring to these letters, I told his Majesty that I did not believe that he could have seen them; he said that he had, on which I suggested that he might have only seen extracts, and that it was not impossible that the letters in their complete state might afford fuller information. I said that I had the letters with me, and I placed them in the King's hands; his Majesty was then pleased to read every word they contained to me; and then told me that I was at liberty to read to this House those or any other documents that I might deem necessary to explain my conduct while holding office in Ireland.

Hear.)"

In the debate, in the BRITISH House of LORDS, on the ROMAN CATHOLIC RELIEF BILL, something very much like an altereation. our readers may remember, occurred between LORD CHANCELLOR LYNDHURST and the EARL of ELDON. A reconciliation seems to have taken place between these sages of the law. In a recent discussion of the inconveniencies to be remedied in the Court of Chancery, the Chancelles, after observing that the same causes of complaint had existed as early as the time of Sir Thomas Mone's elevation to the woolsack, paid this tribute to the character of his own immediate predecessor: "It is impossible for me,-notwithstanding the political differences which now divide us,-It is impossible for me, I say, having once mentioned the name of that noble and learned lord, not to add, that no man sitting on the same bench which he so long filled, and considering the nature of his decisions, can refrain from admiring his sagacity, his erudition, and his extraordinary acquirements .-(Hear, hear.) It has been often said in the profession, that no one ever doubted his decrees except the noble and learned lord himself. I am sure, from the short opportunity which I have had of judging of them, that none of his predecessors ever had a more complete command of the whole complicated system of equity than that noble and learned personage. I therefore feel myself bound to say, that I do not ascribe the delays which have taken place in the Court of Chancery to the noble earl, but to the system established in that court. I say that there has pose of causes when ready for hearing since the first establishment of the Court of Chancery." Lord ELDON said that whatever political differences might have existed, he was not the person unwilling to be reconciled, especially after much more than justice had been done to him.

One of Lord LYEDHURST's proposed improve ments is to make the Master of the Rolls do more work. The present occupant of that office is Sir John LEECH, who has lately been obliged to submit to a very severe surgical operation. The mode taken to guard against opposition from this quarter strikes us as a good specimen of parliamentary ingenuity .-"I have introduced no clause into the bill as to that office, in consequence of the unhappy condition of the learned personage who now fills it. No one is more aware than I am of his know. ledge, his accuteness, his sagacity, and his experience, (hear, hear,) and I should be one of remark, that, on Saturday last, bacon was clause into this bill without first communicating with him upon the subject. I trust that it will not be necessary for me to do so; and I say so with the greater confidence, when I recollect the conduct of this learned Judge on a former transaction, in some respect similar to this. It will be in the recollection of some of your lordships, that this learned personage, in the year 1813, was a member of the House of Commons. In the discussions which took place on the bill for appointing a Vice-Chancellor, this learned person took a very distinguished part; and in the able and powerful speech which that learned person then delivered, he pointed out to the attention of the house the great advantages to be derived from an alteration in the manner of sitting of the Master of the Rolls. Perhaps nable lords are not aware that the Master of the Rolls sits only three times a week during term, and four hours each sitting, thus giving a total of 12 hours a week for the term sittings of his court. But we are not to consider these 12 hours a week as entirely gained for the Court of Chancery, for the sittings of the Masters of the Rolls take place in the evening, and upon the occasions of his sitting, the counsel generally requests the Chancellor and Vice-Chancellor to break up their sittings at three o'clock instead of four, the usual hour of adjournment, to enable them to attend the Rolls Court: so that two hours are lost by these Judges in order to gain four hours for the Master of the Rolls. This reduces the value of the Rolls sittings to two hours each evening, and gives an amount of six hours a week gained for the Court of Chancery in the Rolls. instead of twelve. I repeat, then, that we can only reckon the sittings of the Master of the Rolls as amounting to six hours a week during erm. I do not refer to the proceedings of the earned individual now presiding over the Rolls, for I am aware that that Judge would do more in six hours than many other persons could effect in twelve. But I do think it must be admitted, that considering the salary and emoluments of the Master of the Rolls, and the im_ portance of the situation he occupies, the public have a right to claim at his hands a more extended degree of service than he at present affords. Out of term, the Master of the Rolls site occasionally in the forenoon seldom more than four hours a week-sometimes, indeed, five,but the average may be taken at four. What I propose with regard to the Rolls Court is (I de not mean to insert the provision in the present bill for the reason I have already stated, and because I am bound to believe, from the strong and decided expression of opinion of the learned Judge upon the subject, that he will be most ready to adopt the alteration as soon as it shall be suggested to him,)-I say my proposition is, that the Master of the Rolls shall sit in the morning, like other judges, and break off when it is found necessary. This course, if adopted. will add great strength to the Court of Chancery, and considerably facilitate the business of that court. When I recollect the nature of the learned person's argument on the bill for the appointment of a Vice-Chancellor, and the force and earnestness with which he delivered his opinions, I cannot bring myself to believe, that when I shall submit this proposal to him he will not immediately acquiesce in it. On these grounds, therefore, it is not my intention to make any proposal with respect to the Rolls. Court at present; but it will be for your lordships, when the bill shall have reached a committee, to make some provision on the se if you shall think it necessary to do so."

Estract of a letter from the correspondent of the New York Daily Advertiser:-" Sinyrna, 24th March, 1829.-Our trade is depressed berend any previous example. The Porte has handing here, as there is no possibility of getting them through the Dardanelles. They have therefore turned their thoughts to sending them by land to Constantinople. You may imagine hat a large number of camels this service requires: therefore, they have taken up every one these animals to be found, leaving none of them free for the purposes of commerce. People will not purchase goods of us, for they cannot send them into the country, while the produce of the country is kept back by a similar cause. How long this state of things may last there is no telling. We have letters from Constantinople as late as the 18th instant. It was reported Russians had made a landing at Bourgas, this side of the Balkans, had beaten a corps of 8000 Turks at that place, and kept possession of We are progressing towards warm weather, when the belligerents will go at it again heartily. The Turks will fight obstinately, no doubt, and a great deal of blood will be shed. But I am of on they will eventually be severely treated by the Russians; after which, like true fatalists, y will bow to the stroke, and be as pliant as they are now firm and obstinate. It remains to seen how the rest of the European Cabinets will take the matter. We have no means of ertaining this point; and, indeed, the whole of the late affairs of treaties, alliances, and negotiations, have been jumbled up together in such a way, as no common observer can follow them—however, the affair will be decided this ner. We, all of us here, will be glad of it, be the result as it may; for we are tired of living rtainty so many months, even years. The poor at Commentinople complain for the want of bread stuffs—the government graneries have a supply for upwards of two months—they deal it out sparingly, as you will imagine. FOR THE DAILY CHRONICLE.

WALNUT STREET THEATRE. Pizarro was well played, on Saturday even ing, except a few parts; and the experiments ately made seem to prove that a good five act play is at least as attractive as a good-for-nothing melo-drama. Not that I am so simple as to believe that more than one out of five, of the adies and gentlemen in the house on that evening, were attracted by any thing else than HERR CLINE. This is reasonable enough; for rope dancing is a sort of intellectual Intertainment which every understanding may comprehend and enjoy, without the labour of hardthinking. Every lady, whatever may be her other acquirements, has learnt the use of the skipping rope, with petticoats carefully tucked in, and feet light and nimble as a grasshopper's; and few gentlomen have arrived at years of discretion without practice in the cognate arts of hopscop and leap-frog.

Tragedies and comedies, being composed of words which are strung into sentences, and these again combined in speeches of unequal length, often difficult to be understood without some attention to what is going on, are apt to be irksome at any season, and, in warm weather, abso utely intolcrable. And is not this nearly midsummer, and the house a summer theatre, where repose and comfort ought to be sought, in preferer c: to study and mental exertion?have not often been better pleased than with little occurrence on Saturday. Having seated myself rather thoughtless, without much regard for the convenience of those behind me, I sat out the two first acts without observing that I had in my rear a neighbour of small dimensions, who must have been deprived of all chance of seeing what was transacting on the stage. On discovering how matters stood, I felt disposed to do justice to the little gentleman by offering to exchange places with him. On rising, however, I found that he was propped upon the bench behind him, with arms folded, mouth aiar, and his whole man as soundly asleep as Cerberus after his sop. I had the curiosity, from time to time, to cast a look at this vigilant critie, and found that he slept through the other three acts as undisturbed as if in his cradle. When preparations commenced for fixing HERR CLINE's rope, my little Argus, as if by inspiration, opened his peepers, and clapped and shouted with delight, through the whole of this exhibition, till all his neighbours wished that his eleen had been eternal. I am almost ashamed to confess that I preferred the tragedy. Wood's Pizarro has long ranked among the best of our tragic performances, and last night, assuredly, there was no falling off. PORTER, I believe, did his best as Alonzo and therefore I have no inclination to condemn him. I presume he is aware of his want of the gallantry and spirit required by such a character as the husband of Cora .-PORTER is apt to show too little of that activity of which one of his fellows thinks we never can have too much. Of the two vices, overacting is the worst. I do not like to throw away advice on empty heads, or I could recommend the avoiding of both, and show by reference to Wood's playing, how easily this may be done. WARREN's Las Cases was respectable; but a little more force would have done the character no injury. MERCER, unless I mistook some other for him, played no less than three parts .-The Sentinel, the Priest, and the Blind man. The first is an interesting part, and he did it creditably, though not so impressively as I have seen it by a much inferior actor. The second was good, but much inferior to Boyle's. His old man was perhaps the best of the three, but was rather too sturdy for one of his years .-Though GREENE's talents are not of the tragic kind, he played Orozimbo very judiciously, and deserves credit for it. I thought, however, that I could see his comic propensities constantly striving to get the upper hand of his tragic powers, and the latter very properly resisting them. He is very good in old men; witness his Justice Malcom, on Saturday, among others of the same kınd. Elvira was excellently acted by MRs. Wood This lady's recitation is unquestionably superior to that of any other performer on the American stage; and this acquirement is displayed to great advantage in the measured prose of Pizarro. Performers who value themselves on this talent should be very careful not to give us declama tion in the place of passion. Mas. Wood seldom falls into this error; but I think her Elvira would have been made more perfect by the infusion of a little more energy. Certainly nothing else was wanting. No one in the company, except MRs. WILLIS, could have done any thing like justice to the interesting Cora. In serious parts, this young actress's voice is a treasure to her, as it carries the sentiment directly to the heart. She played the part, too, with great judgment. Merit, in the humblest line, I am unwilling to leave unnoticed. In the boy who leads his blind parent, I was more pleased by MISS KER than by any one whom I had previously seen in the same part, which, though short, is interest-C. CIBBER.

COUNTERFEITER CAUGHT.

We learn, says the Boston Centinel, that on Friday evening, at about 6 o'clock, a person was brought up before the Police Court answering to the name of Winslow Ames, and charged by Reed, the constable, with having in his possession four counterfeit 85 bills of the Boston session four counterfeit $5 bills of the Baston Bank, and one purporting to be of the Bank of North America. We learn that he was com-mitted. Another bill of the former description was also exhibited in Court, which had been in the course of the day, attempted to be palmed off upon Messrs. Grant & Daniel; this bill being suspected to be counterfeit, was stopped for examination, whereupon the holder walked off, and did not return.

A few years ago we obtained a small quantity of barley from the Mediterranean. Mr. Skinner sent a few grains of it to a respectable planter in Alabama. The following extract of a let ter from that gentleman will show the result. "I have got four acres in barley from the Mediterranean, that Mr. Skinner sent me three years ago. My stock was about forty grains. It is a spring barley, but will stand a mild winter, and certainly the heaviest I ever saw."-Ameri-

A friend informs us that, during the heat and calm of Saturday afternoon, the hay-makers in the square between Race and Pine streets, near Seventh, were somewhat alarmed for the safety of a stack of hay, which they had made up with considerable care. A whirlwind took up the heap, and after carrying it some three or four hundred yards, perpendicularly, into the air, scattered its contents about in the upper regions —as if hay-making was to be conducted on an elevated scale.—U. S. Gazette.

NEW HAMPSHIRE. 22,615 votes were given for Mr. Pierce, and 19,583 for Mr. Bell, in the late election for governor in New Hamphshire. Governor Pierce has been inducted into office; and in his address, mentions that he intends to decline being a candidate hereafter. The votes were not laid before the two Houses on the first Wednesday of June, as the constitution requires, through a mistake, which was not discovered until it was too late to obviate it: and consequently, they were obliged to meet in convention on Thursday.

The master of a steamer has been fined $5, by the Superior Court of New-York, for forcibly ejecting from his boat, a passenger who, after repeated admonitions, refused to comply with the known rule of the boats-"not to smoke aft." The captain would have been justified in removing him to another part of the vessel.

At the late meeting, the American Bible So-ciety pledged itself, if properly sustained by its auxiliaries, to place, within two years, a Bible n the hands of every family in the United States that should be willing to receive it. In furtherance of that resolution, a meeting was on Thursday last held in New-York, at which seven thousand six hundred and thirteen dolars were subscribed.

Lightning-Wonderful Preservation. A correspondent of the Washington Co. Post from Hartford, N. Y. under date of May 30th says; "Yesterday afternoon, while a violent thunder shower was passing over this town, the black smith shop owned by Mr. Chester Harris, was struck with lightning, near the ridge, while four men were within. The fluid passed down the end of the building, until it reached a window, which Charles Kiney (one of the four) was in the act of shutting; it shivered every particle of glass from the sash, and passed to his right hand, followed his arm to his shoulder, and fro thence down to his hip, where it was attracted by a vice, and passed off, splitting the vice bench which he then touched, to pieces, exactly before him; it tore his clothes, literally speaking, to rags; setting them, as well as the building, on The sleeve on his right arm was complete ly torn off, and scattered in fragments about the shop; his pantaloons had but three buttons remaining on them, some were even melted; and inally his whole clothes on that side presented the appearance of rags shot from a loaded canvisited by the shock, as the fluid reache ground in three different places, and on different sides, which was considerably injured; the whole four were prostrated by the shock, yet strange as it may appear, no one was materia ly injured, except by the burn, although the of the others had his clothes torn. The whole are now able to walk about, and in a fair way to be entirely well in the course of a few days."

Leaves of trees were probably the first vegetable substances used for writing upon. The leaves of the Cumean Sybil, and the oracular eaves of the oaks of Dodona, were of this description; even to this time, in some parts of India, leaves of various kinds of palm are applied to this purpose.

A letter from a gentleman in Middletown Coup. to his friend in New York, dated 10th inst. says-"There was a horrid deed committed last evening in Berlin, by a man named Steel. He commenced by beating his wife on her head with an axe, and then cut her throat, after which he cut his own throat!! It is said they are both dead. This diabolical transaction upposed to be the effect of strong drink."

The use of simple VAPOUR as a luxury and cleans The use of simple VAPOUR as a luxury and cleanser of the skin, is highly salutary. While the sensations experienced are those of delight, simple Vapour has a very decisive effect in beautifying the skin, which it renders both soft and delicate, removing the morphew, freekles, grubs, pimples, and eraptions of the face. Of the powers of simple Vapour, directed to this particular object, the most satisfactory references can be given.—
To the frequent use of the Bath, the Ladies of the East are chiefly indebted for that peculiar softness of the skin, and that delicacy and beauty of complexion, for which they have so long been celebrated. In addition to this, it ordinarily angments the appetite, in stimulating the skin, it acts sympathetically on the stomach, and imparts energy to the functions of this organ. The idea that its use renders subsequent exposure to the air improper or injurious, ample experience has demonstrated a popular error, or a vulgar prejudice. The proprietor feels satisfied that it needs only a trial to be highly appreciated.

DR. DEAN'S RHEUMATIC ELIXIR, prepared UST received and for sale by the subscriber, rom the same articles that constitute his celebrated ent Vegetable Rheamatic Pills, well known to ma this city, and of which nearly 200,000 boxes have been

The following advertisement extracted from the bill of directions accompanying each bottle, will give to the public, facts respecting the medicine, and the high opinion the doctor entertains of it from actual experience. The Rheumatic Eixir which I now offer the public The Rheumatic Elixir which I now offer the public for trial, will be found, for common use, the most safe, effectual and pleasant physic ever offered; being composed entirely of vegetable materials, it does not predispose to take cold like other physic, and may be taken at any time. It gives an appetite, assists digestion, and carries off all crudities from the stomach. It may be taken by females in circumstances to great advantage. If, on taking cold, some of this Elixir is taken on going to bed, it will be found to operate kindly the next day, and carry off any bad effects which might have remained of such cold, if it had not been taken. Families will find, by a free use of this Elixir, that one half at least, of the usual services of the physician may be dispensed with, and at the same time get rid of many chronic complaints, which cause many to drag out an unhappy life.

This Elixir being a very diffusible stimulus, it excites the natural action of every part of the body, thereby restores suppressed perspiration on taking cold, which is stores suppressed perspiration on taking cold, which is the cause and lays the foundation of a large proportion of the disorders which the human body is subject to.

The Elixir can be more easily taken by some people and is much better adapted to some constitutions and to some cases of disease than the pills. These are all discresome cases of disease than the pills. These are all disor-ders where there is a want of action in the system, a cold phlegmatic state of the stomach and bowels, and a cold inactive state of the blood and juices, in which state are chronic Rheumatism, sick or nervous head-aches, ner-vous and rheumatic pains of the stomach and bowels. For the above complaints, and the following, the Elixir will be found eminently useful, viz: recent colds; coughs, unattended with fever; a particular affection of the face, called Tie Douloureux; diarrheas and dysenta-ries not strended with fever worms in children ies not attended with fever, worms in child there is always a cold, phlegmy state of the bowels.

The Elixir will be found to be admirably adapted to resist the effects of a foggy climate, and may be termed an excellent antifogmatic. — The joundice being a disease of a cold phleg matic nature, it is well adapted to that lu injuries of any particular part of the body, rhene matic complaints are very upt to fall on those parts, and much retards the cure, in such cases the Elixir has been found a very useful assistant in restoring the injured part.

In seasons when particular epidemic complaints prevail, the Elixir, by keeping the bowels open, and the blood in natural action, serves as a good preventive to

CERTIFICATES.

From Dr. JOHN GORHAM COFFIN, Boston.
Dear 'ir-The medicinal article you sent me I have made trial of, though not so fully as I could have wished.
It appears by your letter, that you have long been in the practice of tising it, patiently in Rheumanic core.
From what I have neen of it, I have no doubt of its preservsing rare victues in that complaint, and that a preparation in spirit would be well adapted to chronic cases, as that would render it more diffusible in its effects.

SCHUYLRILL ICE. THE subscriber respectfully informs his old customers, friends and the public, that he has the largest stock of Ice that has been put up in this city, of the purest kind, and relected with the greatest care. Two of the ice houses are the most spacious in the United States, situated near Fair Mount dam, from whence they were filled with the choicest less, and I can with truth declare that I have two-thirds more school-kill ice than any other dealer in the article.
